CHAPASCO GETS LIFE TERM AFTER JURY RETURNS GUILTY VERDICT IN THE SKLAR MURDER CASE; JURY RECOMMENDS NO PAROLE BE CONSIDERED; TRIAL LASTED NINE DAYS

"There is Not One Single Mitigating Circumstance in This Case," Says Judge Biester, As He Instructs the Jury
— "Society Will Be Better Off Without Him. The Penalty of Death Will Be Proper" — Hold-Up and Murder Occurred at Croydon on May 19th Last Year

DOYLESTOWN, June 14—Found guilty of first-degree murder with a penalty of life imprisonment. Harry W. Chapasco, 37, of Philadelphia, is the second of three to be tried and found guilty of the murder of David Sklar, owner of the Safe Food Market, Croydon, on the night of May 19th.

The jury last night recommended that no parole ever be considered for Chapasco. The defendant glared at Judge Edward G. Biester, who told the jury he "had no fault to find with the verdict."

Chapasco's nine-day trial in Bucks County Court went to the jury of 11 men and one woman after the Commonwealth demanded the death sentence.

Sklar was slain in a $100 holdup May 19, 1950, on a parking lot behind his store. Martin J. Pearson, 25, of Philadelphia, is serving a life sentence as the "trigger-man." He named Chapasco and Walter J. Lowrey of Croydon, as accomplices. Lowrey is yet to be tried.

Judge Biester began his final instructions to the jury at 4:05 p.m. after the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Donald W. Vanartdalen, had climaxed his summation:

"There is not one single mitigating circumstance in this case." He pointed to Chapasco and continued. "Society will be well off without him. The penalty of death will be proper."

Vanartdalen said Chapasco bludgeoned Sklar to the ground with a .45-caliber pistol before Pearson shot him. He said the testimony of a coroner's physician indicated the head blow fractured Sklar's skull and might have been fatal in itself.

John P. Fullam, one of Chapasco's

THE WAR

TOKYO—Allied tank and infantry columns hammered out fresh gains up to more than a mile today after overrunning North Korea's "Iron Triangle" and threatening to cut off thousands of Red troops.

The United Nations offensive rolled slowly forward in all sectors except in the area northeast of captured Kumhwa. There Chinese soldiers battled bitterly to stall an Allied drive on pivotal Kumhong.

The UN experienced what a Thursday night Eighth Army communiqué described as "heavy resistance" from a Communist battalion defending high ground southwest of Kumhong. The latter junction is 13 miles northeast of Kumhwa.

Along North Korea's eastern coastal flank, Allied troops repulsed two new red counterattacks northwest of Kumsong. The latter junction is 13 miles northeast of Kumhwa.

The procession took place in the church due to the rain.

PENNDEL WANTS POSTAL DELIVERY

Charles S. Doyle Will Go To Washington To Plead The Case

THE AREA IS GROWING

PENNDEL, June 14—Today, Charles S. Doyle, former Postmaster of Penndel, will go to Washington where he will meet with the First Assistant Postmaster General, by appointment on Friday, June 15.

Mr. Doyle's trip is being made at the request of Mrs. Marie G. Hastings, now acting Postmaster of Penndel, in trying to secure city delivery for patrons of the Penndel Post Office.

The application for postal delivery in Penndel is given impetus by the rapid development of the old Matthews tract, known as Glenview, where about one-third of the 110 houses planned have been completed.

A petition for postal delivery was recently sent to the Post Office Department signed by all Glenview residents; the new acting Postmaster of Penndel is making a strong effort, however, to secure delivery for the entire borough, including perhaps some buildings in Middletown Township immediately adjacent to the Borough of Penndel.

About four years ago, during Mr. Doyle's administration of the office, application was made for city delivery.

Speech Correction Program Reaches 617

Report Prepared by County Board of School Directors

126 "SERIOUS" CASES

The 1951 Bucks County program of speech correction reached 617 pupils according to a report prepared for the county board of school directors. Dorothy Soden, of Wrightstown township, a graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and a speech correctionist on the staff of the county superintendent of schools spent three months in an experimental speech correction program.

Of the 617 pupils referred to her for diagnosis, 507 were found to have some kind of speech defect, most of which can be corrected with the assistance of the parents and the teachers. 126 pupils were classified as serious oral inaccuracies and 116 as slight oral inaccuracies. Ninety-four stutters were discovered and correction programs outlined for each one. Incidentally the report indicated that a large number of stutters originated from too much parental pressure on the child to make good scholastic grades.

Eighty-seven pupils had lingual lisps and 47 lateral lisps. The speech problem of 16 cases arose from their foreign background. In ten cases poor speech was traced to serious hearing losses which prevented children from hearing words spoken correctly. Ten children had cleft palate and nine had malocclusion or poor teeth formations. Five of the cases included

FLAG DAY

Flag Day, June 14th, is a unique Pennsylvania holiday. It celebrates the official adoption of the Stars and Stripes as our national flag by Act of the Continental Congress meeting in Philadelphia on June 14, 1777.

The American flag was adopted in Pennsylvania and created in Pennsylvania. It followed the general pattern of the thirteen stripes of the Union flag which had been designed by a committee headed by Benjamin Franklin, and replaced the British Union Jack on a blue field, which appeared on the earlier design by a circle of 13 stars. This design has been attributed to Francis Hopkinson, a talented Philadelphia lawyer and patriot who wrote the first American ballad and the first American popular song, as well as the first native instrumental music ever performed in our country. He was also one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Clothing ceilings, due today, will "leave apparel prices just about where they are," stabilization officials said. All users of steel, copper and aluminum may be put under allocation controls later this year. New delays cast doubt on the ability of Congress to pass a new and stronger controls bill before the present law expires.

A House committee approved the $7,500,000,000 defense tax bill, $2,500,000,000 short of the President's request. By voice vote the House passed and sent to the Senate a rivers and harbors bill cut 20 per cent.

The United States and Britain reached agreement on terms of a Japanese peace treaty, subject to ratification by the British Cabinet, set for today.

Secretary Acheson said the United States did not rule out discussion of the North Atlantic treaty at a foreign ministers' conference but did oppose putting it on an agenda.

A variety of atomic weapons was successfully tested at Eniwetok and "most useful information on the hydrogen bomb was obtained," Washington said.

"Some pretty big people" were said by stabilization officials to be involved in suspected black marketing of meat and in price violations. Packers' representatives told

ACADEMIC FREEDOM ON TRIAL

Only this crazy age could produce the strange situation of a professor being honored at Yale because he was fired from the University of California.

Yet that's what happened this week. The professor in question is Dr. Edward C. Tolman, a psychologist. He was dismissed last year for refusing to take the loyalty oath required by the California institution.

Without waiting to see whether the California Supreme Court, which is studying the case, would uphold the dismissal as being justified, and would agree with California's Un-American Activities Committee that six groups in which Dr. Tolman was affiliated were pro-Communist Red-Front subversive organizations, Yale seized upon the incident to put its benediction on the man whose "dignity as a scholar" would not permit him to take an oath to be loyal to the United States.

Lest there be question that Yale was honoring him for defying the California laws, not for scholastic achievement, the citation for Dr. Tolman reads: "Valiant defender of the freedom of the mind, Yale confers upon you the degree of Doctor of Science."

Nothing, perhaps, could more clearly illustrate the emotional, non-scientific and irresponsible method by which a cluster of "better minds" in our society are attempting to set themselves up as superior to laws, constitutions and loyalty, than the fact that Yale acted in this matter without waiting for the outcome of the court tests.

Obviously, the men in charge of Yale University, in this instance, made up their minds long ago. Obviously, they are on the side, not of the American people, "we, the people," and their Constitution, but of those who consider themselves too big and important to have such loyalties.

Obviously they have little respect for the Supreme Court of California.

All this is not unfamiliar to those who have read their

Fraternal Order of Police To Have Home at Edgely

Fraternal Order of Police, Bucks Lodge No. 53, at a meeting held last evening at Morrisville, Pa., held in Fish & Game Association headquarters, accepted a building located along the Delaware river in Edgely to be used as a home for the lodge.

The lodge set aside a fund to be used for repairing and maintenance of the building. President Bateman, of Newtown, appointed a committee of three men to handle details as to protection and care of the building. Committee appointed was Police Officers VanSant, Della, and Estelle of the Bristol police department.

The lodge has plans to hold meetings in and to use the building as a recreation center for all police and to have a pistol range indoors in the basement. The waterfront and beach are to be cleaned for swimming and picnics for use of the members' families and the children of the immediate vicinity.

The meeting was conducted by President Bateman, and Morrisville police acted as hosts of the evening.

FLAG DAY

Today is the 174th anniversary of the birth of the Stars and Stripes, otherwise known as Flag Day. The American people have been reminded of it so often that it is scarcely necessary to mention again that the flag is but an emblem. However simple or costly the material from which it is made, however appealing the colors, it is the arrangement of the stars and stripes and the principles symbolized that give it the deep meaning it has for every American.

To the American no flag is so beautiful, though there are other beautiful flags, because it embraces a history which thrills the heart and represents a national ideal that serves as a beacon to men who treasure freedom everywhere.

The flag in spirit is everything. Its very appearance ought to make for good citizenship. Its graceful, colorful folds waving in the breeze thrill the heart of America. Men and women have suffered and sacrificed that it may continue to wave.

This Flag Day Old Glory should receive greater homage than ever from the citizens of the great free nation it symbolizes.

THE BEEF SITUATION

As had been predicted, price controls which went into effect only a few days ago have started to trim the nation's supply of beef, and acute shortages are reported in metropolitan centers. Packers are unable to buy a sufficient number of cattle for the simple reason that the market is higher than prices prescribed under the OPS regulation which went into effect last week.

Supplies of live cattle coming to major markets dropped 30 per cent since the government rollback became effective. As a result packers throughout the nation have curtailed slaughter or discontinued it entirely, with serious layoffs of workers.

The recent rollback on meat puts the full force of the whole price cut right back to the farmer and rancher, with the inevitable result of starting a black market or putting the beef producer out of business. Price reductions will start and end with the producer because there is no slack to be taken up by the processors, whose profits, never too high, must be had from the spread between the cost of live animals and what the public pays over the retail counter. This may come as a surprise to the uninformed.

Meanwhile authentic representatives of the cattlemen have had President Truman's ear but to no tangible effect. Price Chief DiSalle insists the order will stand, and that he will be supported in this attitude by the administration. Because the American people will have their beef, whether or no, black markets will flourish, and another great industry will suffer from the slings and arrows of outrageous politics.

Mail carriers are to be provided with scooters, and the last remaining American on his feet will be relegated, with the possible exception of Dad, walking the baby.

above were recommended for speech clinics. The number of cases were fairly well distributed in all districts, excepting in West Rockhill township where there were twenty-one cases needing attention.

The largest number of cases examined were in Central Bucks High School where there were 126 referrals, a great many of which merely had developed poor habits in articulation. Palisades, Pennshury, Quakertown-Tohickon, Northampton Township, New Hope-Solebury, Centennial Joint, Central Bucks, Bensalem and Bristol township led in the number of cases of stutters.

The improvement in most cases as a result of Mrs. Soden's assistance had led the county authorities to recommend that the program be continued in 1951-52 term. The county board is expected to expand the speech correction program. In the proposed program Mrs. Soden would follow, once every five or six weeks, the cases already diagnosed.

Mrs. Soden recommended that particular attention be given to the correction of speech difficulties in the primary grades so that the children do not develop emotional problems in which cases more time and patience is required in the correction program.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1951
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, June 14—Secretary of State Dean Acheson's constant references to the happiness enjoyed by Chiang Kai-Shek as a result of Russia's taking over Chinese ports and railways is hogwash.

Chiang wasn't even invited to Yalta where the U. S. and Russia sliced up China to Soviet advantage. This was only the beginning of the sell-out. Chiang fought a losing war in trying to keep the Chinese Communists out of his backyard from then on. The reason is simple.

The State Department boxed in the Nationalist Chinese leader with a crew of wild-eyed Russian lovers including Henry Wallace, who had somehow gotten himself elected Vice President.

Wallace was wandering all over China with hay in his hair, explaining to Chiang that all he had to do was cooperate with the Soviet Union and the Chinese Communists in order to have peace.

Standing on the sidelines and putting in their two bits worth of happy talk for the Communists were John S. Service, John Carter Vincent and the Baltimore bugle, Owen Lattimore, who was always running off on State Department missions. Now, of course, nobody at the State Department, from Acheson on down, seems to remember just who you mean when you mention Lattimore.

To really appreciate this crew you have to read the report they sent back to the State Department as a result of their working over Chiang to persuade him to be nice to the Reds. Every time Chiang would shake his head over their gabbing about the peaceful intentions of the Communists, Wallace and his gang slipped in the knife with a gentle reminder that if Chiang failed to play ball U. S. aid would dry up.

Notes on the Wallace-Chiang conversations, with the Baltimore bugle doing the translating, are replete with occasions when Chiang balked only long enough for Wallace and his crew to come up with another warning.

The Russians also played up to Chiang during this period. Every now and then some State Department official would trot over to Chiang's house and slip him a little gossip about how much the Russian leaders admired him. Stalin, in fact, let it drop that in his opinion Chiang was the only Chinese leader capable of unifying and rebuilding "postwar China." This, of course, also was the State Department line until Russia changed her mind about Chiang. Our State Department acted just like any other branch office of the Politburo. Chiang suddenly became a thief and an incompetent military general and was charged with lacking the support of his people.

If he was nothing else, Chiang was probably the most confused human on earth by the time Wallace and his entourage got through working him over. All the while Service, Vincent, Lattimore and Wallace were patting Chiang on the back and promising a lot of U. H. help, they were hustling off after dark to visit Chinese Communist leaders.

Chiang had his secret police keep tabs on the Wallace gang and what they found out must have convinced Chiang that he was getting the business. But there wasn't much he could do. He needed U. S. supplies and was smart enough to know that the only way he would get them would be to "cooperate" with Wallace's program.

When a Senator asked Acheson about all of this, the Secretary of State said that nobody ever went to China representing this Government who was not wholeheartedly in support of Chiang and his policies. The Secretary of State did not know what he was talking about.

In October of 1944, Service, who was political advisor to U. S. military leaders in China, sent a secret memorandum back to Washington that left Chiang with knives sticking out all over his back. This was at the time when we were trying to get Chiang's fighting forces in shape to reopen attacks on the Japs. Chiang had only been fighting the Japs for seven years then, but he agreed that he could do them more damage if we sent along a few guns and officers to help train his troops. But Service, a political military advisor to American generals supposed to be helping Chiang get his attack underway, recommended that the U. S.:

1. No longer accord favored treatment to Chiang.

2. Not regard with indifference the opinions of the Chinese Communists and other liberal parties.

As a postscript, according to one of Chiang's intelligence reports, Service wrote that "any new government, compared to Chiang's, can better mobilize the military might of the masses."

There was only one other "new" government, and that was Communist.

Somebody should ask Acheson if he ever read this contribution to peace and democracy. Service is right handy in the State Department, so the Senators could get it first hand, even if it makes a liar out of Service's boss.

Learning Right and Wrong

By CARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PH.D.

YESTERDAY we suggested that the recent appalling disclosure of connections which so many persons chosen to represent us in our local state and national governments have with the underworld, and of the practice of influence by many public officials for fattening the purses of their personal friends may, in part, be a natural product of the philosophy and practice of home and school education during the last several decades.

We observed that the prevailing philosophy of education has been interpreted by the home and school generally to mean that restraints and requirements of the growing child and talk with him about doing right are to be avoided as harmful or futile. In print and public talks one may often read or hear that character can't be taught but has to grow out of the immediate situation. Indeed, teachers and parents have been led to suppose they are old-fashioned if they talk of things right or wrong with the growing child not connected with an immediate problem. They have been told that right and wrong are wholly relative matters always determined by the

What is Feasible

How easily this has been interpreted and accepted to mean that what is right is what is feasible or convenient! This, in turn, is readily carried forth to mean that what is right is virtually what you can get away with.

Principles of eternal rightness and wrongness are more or less taboo.

In this column I have maintained that best child-rearing and education accepts many of the basic principles of rightness and wrongness which have come down to us in the experiences of the find many of these shortcomings corrected at the time investigation is made by the Post Office Department.

Taking encouragement from the influx of new people into the borough and adjacent territory which should bring the population count very close to the minimum of 2,500.

Mr. Doyle and the new Postmaster are making an all out effort to secure delivery, not only for the Borough, but also for the adjacent territory even closer than the Glenview development. Citizens living in Pennel and nearby can help by pressing for needed civic improvements mentioned in the Postmaster General's letter quoted above.

livery but was refused on several grounds. The First Assistant Postmaster General in letter dated June 7, 1948, stated that while the receipts for the preceding year were sufficient to justify delivery service, the borough population was under a thousand, whereas 2,500 is the minimum requirement for the establishment of delivery service.

Other requirements for civic improvements were not met, as the territory was not 50% built-up, good continuous sidewalks not provided, houses not numbered, nor street signs erected. It is hoped that the present application will history. Brilliant minds, for many generations, often have shown a narcissus personality. They are willing to become martyrs, if that is the quickest way to the public eye. Socrates took the hemlock, beyond question, with mixed emotions; at least one corner of his mind was glorying in the fact that his death was doing as much to make his fame immortal as his life had done.

Keenness of intellect in certain fields is no guarantee of a man's not being completely the fool in another. Sir Oliver Lodge and Conan Doyle, one a magnificent mathematician and the other a gifted writer, became figures of tragic ridicule when they wandered astray in psychologic subjects and sought to prove contacts with the dead.

Greater figures than any of the current crop of divided-loyalty professors have tagged along with fantastic foibles, in which vanity of opinion and pride in accomplishment misled them into sometimes tragic excesses. Literature has few more brilliant figures than Swinburne and Wilde—and history has few more ridiculous chapters than that of the Pre-Raphaelite movement in which both of them joined.

How much of the current insistence on complete "academic freedom" is conceit and how much of it is a martyr-complex?

No one can tell. One thing is certain—a generation's uneasiness over what the "advanced" teachers in high school and college might be instructing the young, blazed into very grave anxiety when, here and there, in this nation and abroad, educators entrusted with atomic secrets betrayed them to Russia.

The vagaries of the human mind defy prediction. Most anything can be "rationalized." Small mentalities will swallow nearly any dose, if it is properly euphemistically labelled. Re-name patriotism "nationalism," and the thoughtless brilliant brains swing in like sheep.

Meanwhile, the little fellow in the middle, the plain average citizen, the man with a wife and a home, and a household of children whom he hopes someday to see pick up where he leaves off, the common man for whom this nation was created and to whom all our basic documents insist the government actually belongs — what is he to think?

If he is dazzled by college degrees and high honors, he can become befuddled over this academic freedom to the point where he can't see how anyone can stop the teaching even of outright anarchy and sedition.

If he knows enough about his supposedly guaranteed form of government, he knows that our mis-named "democracy" is really very tough and practical, and that remedies for academic abuses, especially those perpetrated with the public's money, are readily available any time the public demands them with sufficient insistence.

And if he is just an average guy, loving his country, sullenly provoked by those who are "above" being loyal to it, irritated because disloyalty has been lauded and honored with impunity, unpunished, then he may swing in behind a fascist type of mailed-fist government, as the only way he can picture of driving the subversivists off the ship of State. That's the pity of it — the constant and blatant advocacy of communist doctrines, on campuses and elsewhere, is an almost irresistible impetus driving the nation in the direction of a police state.

Rennie Tritschler, chairman of the fund-raising committee, reported that contributions from the treasury of the different locals was very encouraging and plans are setting under way for soliciting funds among the members of the locals, and a pledge card system is the process of being worked out. The reports on the raising of money for the hospital are all very encouraging, Mr. Flatch said, and the way the campaign is shaping up will be able to contribute its share for the project.

The next meeting of the committee will be held July 18th in the union office of Local No. 130, A. W. C. I. O., Bristol.

Chapasco Gets Life Term In Sklar Murder Case

two lawyers, pleaded with the jury for consideration of the defendant's background. Born of Russian parents, Chapasco became motherless as an infant and lost his father in early childhood, he said. Chapasco had served previous jail sentences as a gunman.

"I don't bother the cops and I don't expect them to bother me," was one of the numerous witness stand remarks from the lips of the accused Chapasco, who repudiated most of the contents of two confessions, one by himself and the other by his pal, Marty Pearson, now serving life for the murder of Sklar.

On the witness stand, Chapasco, a native of Shenandoah and an ex-convict, who was once sentenced to 15 to 30 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary, and a former bootleg coal digger, denied that he was even at Croydon on the night of May 19, 1950, when the Safe Food Markets store president and several others employed there were held up, and Sklar was murdered.

Chapasco did admit, however, that he loaned two loaded guns to Marty Pearson whom he told the jury, asked for the guns because he had a job guarding a gambling house and needed them. Chapasco admitted that he loaded the guns himself at his own home, for Pearson, because "you need a loaded gun at a gambling joint."

Chapasco said that he gave Pearson the guns in Philadelphia on the early evening of May 19, last year, and that Pearson returned to the city later, about 10:30, met him, and told him that he had gotten into some trouble, held up super-market, and fellow was shot.

Chapasco said that Pearson asked him to drive him up-State, to get away for a few days, and that he did do just that. He denied emphatically that he had anything to do with the murder of Sklar or the holdup.

"The police threatened me, but never touched me," Chapasco remarked under cross-examination by the Assistant D. A. Donald W. Vandalsden, who is prosecuting the defendant.

Carfagno (a State police detective) told me that all I needed was a little slapping around," was another of Chapasco's statements.

"Why wouldn't I sign the statements, with all those State Police standing around?" was another.

Chapasco testified that Pearson told him about the shooting as they were leaving Philadelphia for Shenandoah.

"He told me that he stuck up a super-market at Croydon, and a guy jumped 'Jim' and he shot a guy," Chapasco quoted Pearson as saying.

The defendant said that he was "given a 'working over' by a State Policeman in Shenandoah in 1935, when he was kicked and had to have an operation performed on him in the penitentiary."

Chapasco said that he served three years in the United States Army overseas and was honorably discharged.

His 15 to 30 year sentence in the "pen" for arson of an automobile and other crimes, had been commuted by the State Pardons Board and the late Governor James, to 7 years.

Chapasco also denied that he ever knew Walter Lowrey, the third man charged with the Sklar murder, who will be tried in September. Lowrey was named in Pearson's statement as the spotter who picked out the place to rob.

"Pearson told me that he got but $35 in the holdup," Chapasco testified. "He didn't give me any of the money; I had my own money. I was making over $100 a week at the time.

"When I was arrested in Philadelphia, the police were in plain clothes and they didn't tell me who they were at first, not until they took me to the State Police barracks at Langhorne.

"At the District Attorney's office in Morrisville, I was questioned again and did sign a statement and also read Pearson's statement, and said the contents were all true. Who wouldn't with police all around?

"At Morrisville, McCann (a detective) said to me: 'If you don't have something to say pretty soon you will confess to the murder of Lincoln by the time we get through with you.'

"The District Attorney said to me: 'You don't have to say a thing, I've got you.'

"I said to Pearson, after reading his statement: 'Why did you say those things like that for when they are not true?' and he only shrugged his shoulders."

Chapasco explained his thumb prints on a gun found at the scene by saying that when he gave the gun to Pearson in Philadelphia that he took out the clip and showed that it was loaded, and it was then, he said, that the print could have been made.

Detective Fred Kohler, in rebuttal, testified that he never said to Chapasco, "Look, nobody knows where you are; you'd better start talking." A number of other Chapasco statements were rebutted by Kohler.

"No threats were made at anytime to Chapasco," McCann added.

Court Stenographer Edgar Moore, District Attorney Willard S. Curtin were also rebuttal witnesses.

The defense called Miss Anna Miszak, a niece of Chapasco, this morning. She testified that Chapasco never had an "Eisenhower jacket" such as the Commonwealth witnesses said Chapasco had worn the night of the crime.

The directors heard report from Mr. Harvey of Rocke & Company, of the check made on producers who are liable for payment of amusement and trailer taxes. It was noted, the report showed, that there are apparently some making no conscientious effort to follow the resolution governing collections of such taxes. The board was informed that the plan is to push for 100% collection.

Coal bids were opened, low bidder being Ashton Brothers. Contract was awarded Edward E. Babb Co., low bidder on general and art supplies.

Mrs. Helen Brenner, tax collector, was exonerated from the tax duplicate of last year.

The board authorized advertising bids for work to be done on repiping of the water system at the high school. The directors authorized transfer of up to $20,000 from the school district funds to Bensalem Township Authority.

Representatives of Bensalem township taxpayers visited during the session.

SCHOOL FAREWELL IS BASED ON 'HENRY VIII'

Written by Marie Anne Pierro, Bristol High, Class of '51

MARIE ANNE PIERRO

FAREWELL

Marie Anne Pierro, Valedictorian

Bristol High School, Class 1951

Based on Shakespeare's Henry VIII
Farewell! A long farewell to all our school days!

This is the fate of each; today he enters.

His class in tender hope; tomorrow, blossoms,

And bears his blushing honors thick upon him;

The third day comes a test—a telling test—

That when he fears, poor student, that full surely

His marks will fail to pass him, rates him high,

And then he leaves, as we do. We have ventured.

Like little children, playing here at life,
Four happy seasons in this school of learning,
So far beyond our dreams. Our hard-won gifts
At last fall on our heads, and now have drowned us
As masters ripe for service, in the army
Of life's great stream, that must forever claim us.
Bright hope and promise of the world, we greet ye!
We feel our hearts new opened O how happy
Is that student who wins such princely favors!
There is, betwixt the fate we now aspire to,
And our accomplishment, much for our doing.
More trials and fears than schools or students have;
But as we go, we go forth conquerors.
Never to come again!
Classmates, I did not think to shed a tear
In all our parting; but thought has forced me,
Out of my tender youth, to play the human.

Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Classmates; And when we are forgotten, as we shall be,
And speak to other people, where no mention Of school days stir our memories, say life taught us.
Even in youth, to tread the way of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honor.
Finding the way, out of school life, to rise in a sure and safe one, though so many miss it.

Mark every task, and that which trained us all.
Classmates, I charge ye each, girl on ambition;
With that spur, worlds conquered; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, win without it?
Love thyself well; cherish the work life brings ye;
Nothing will win so much as honesty.
Still, in thy right hand, carry a resolute will,
And faith to silence fear. Be just and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aimest at be thy God's.
Thy Country's and truth's; then if we fall, O classmates,
We fall as blessed martyrs! Serve the world;
And — Classmates, let us go!
We'll show the world the best of all we have.
To the last venture: 'tis the world's; our name.
And our devotion to mankind, is all we dare to call our own. But Classmates,

If we but serve the world with half the zeal
We've served our school, we need not in our age.
Fear any lack of joy at our success.
Go forth with patience. One and all, farewell!
Our hopes are high! To heaven it self they swell!

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Aiding The Enemy

Washington, June 14.

A few days ago two pieces of information were given the American people which did not get large headlines—but should. For, better than anything else they made clear the sort of havoc the Russian menace is creating in our internal economy. They also go far to sustain the theory that real Soviet strategy is not to precipitate a general war but by a series of threatening acts just short of war force us into an expansion and expenditure so gigantic and prolonged as ultimately to break down our Federal fiscal structure.

The first of these pieces of information came from Defense Secretary George C. Marshall, who told Senate committee that the unchecked inflation of the past year as taken more than $7,000,000,000 of the $35,000,000,000 authorized or procurement of hard and soft tools and military construction during 1951. This is in line with the statements of Chief Mobilizer Wilson and Deputy Defense Secretary Lovett that armament costs have risen more than twenty percent. This has not been contradicted. It can be accepted as fact.

To drive home his argument General Marshall asserted that the Army estimates the increase in beef prices alone will boost the Army's food bill by $160,000,000 this year.

The other piece of information came from Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, who, as chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Spending, announced that the cost of the Federal civilian pay roll now has passed $8,300,000,000 a year. The increase in citizen jobholders during April was at the rate of 1,500 a day. Seventy Federal agencies reported an aggregate pay roll for the month of March of $693,235,000. In cost as in number the level now has reached the peak of the World War II period and both are mounting daily. For ten consecutive months civilian employment has increased an average of more than 1,000 a day.

Apprehension and indignation have been expressed over the alleged aid and comfort given the Russians by revelations at the MacArthur hearings. But, it can be most convincingly argued that our enemies derive vastly more satisfaction from these Marshall-Byrd statements which so clearly show our failure to do the elementary things essential to our economic strength and stability. General Marshall and Senator Byrd revealed no secrets in those statements. They told the Soviet leaders nothing they did not know. All they did—and it was their clear duty to do so—was to confirm the obvious fact that since the national emergency arose we have exhibited a shocking incompetency to manage our own affairs and have inflicted a damage upon ourselves that can only be reckoned in the billions and is reflected in less armament for defense and an enfeebled support for our armed forces in the field.

Conceding that the Soviet strategy is to weaken us economically, it must greatly rejoice our enemies to know the progress in that direction made since the Korean war began. Solemnly warned that inflation was our most dangerous foe and rigid reduction in nondefense expenditures was vital, almost incredulously we disregarded the repeated warnings. And, through indefensible political cowardice we have permitted inflation to afflict us calamitously and our Federal finances are in a confused and almost uncontrollable state. General Marshall has made the first clear. Senator Byrd's figures show that instead of saving the billions which could be saved, the costs of our nondefense activities of the Government are steadily mounting.

It is difficult to imagine a more humiliating confession for Americans than is involved in the Marshall-Byrd statements. They mean that after a year of facing a great crisis we have utterly failed to do the two vital things which practically everyone agrees are essential.

tial to a successful defense effort—first, price control; second, elimination of all nonessential expenditures. Literally, there is no defense for this failure. It comes close to a record for Administration cowardice and stupidity. And the reasons are so clearly political as to be shameful. Mr. Truman is fond of describing himself as a "fighting man." Yet, in this crisis he has flinched from a fight with the labor bosses who are his political allies and permitted a calamitous twenty per cent inflation.

And he is still flinching. The absurd contention of the labor bosses is that there must be no wage control until price control has been achieved. Wage control being basic plain. As to the economy for which in price control how the latter can Senator Byrd and others have appealed, clearly that cannot be accomplished without White House leadership. Of that leadership there has not been a trace. Nothing like the above facts concerning our MacArthur hearings have developed in the domestic economy.

"GREETINGS" GIVEN BY THE SALUTATORIAN

Presented by Betty Ann McCarthy at Commencement Program

FOR THE CLASS OF 1951

BETTY ANN McCARTHY

GREETINGS!

Betty Ann McCarthy, Salutatorian Bristol High School, Class 1951. We, the class of 1951, greet you, one and all!

We welcome our parents and relatives, who have given us all the loving care and guidance necessary during the years of our youth.

We greet our teachers, who have patiently directed our learning during the past twelve years.

We greet also our Principal, who has proved himself a staunch friend to every senior present tonight; our Superintendent, and the Bristol Board of Education, who have provided us with the advantages of a fine school system.

We look upon the world into which we are going tonight with no less of wonder which caused Shakespeare's Miranda to exclaim: "Oh, brave new world! Which hath such creatures in it?"

The creatures of our new world—the creation of science and invention—hold no less of marvel and surprise for us. Like the young Miranda, we would know more about the world which science has created for us. Tonight in our review, my classmates will be thinking about machines and their power, the mind and its might, religion and the philosophy underlying it. We are asking questions about the effect of science upon our lives—individually and as citizens of one world. We tremble at the magnitude of the problems to which we are endeavoring to find answers. The voice of history cautions us to be careful lest science strike a devastating blow; the voice of tomorrow challenges us to release the untold blessings that science is ready to bestow upon all mankind. We shun a monster Frankenstein, but we seek to follow in the way of Truth, Light, and Life. Above the noise of frenzied living, there comes the peace of whispered calm: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

NEW SYNTHETIC FIBERS GRADUALLY APPEAR ON MARKET

By Frances Vannoy (Home Economics Extension Representative)

A new group of synthetic fibers is gradually appearing on the market. As production is increased, they will become more generally available. However, their distribution is limited now.

One of the new synthetic fibers is Fiber V or Dacron. This fiber, which can be made on the same machinery as nylon, will be found in sheer dress goods and shirtings.

Its greatest use is likely to be for industrial fabrics.

Another new fiber, Orlon, is made from coal, water, air, petroleum, limestone, and natural gases. It is strong, shrinks and stretches very little, dries quickly, wears well, has a pleasing appearance and comfortable feel. It will be used for curtains, thread, and wearing apparel of all kinds. Orlon will be combined with rayon and nylon in varying proportions to give new textures.

Orlon shows exceptional resistance to deterioration from the effects of sunlight, moisture, mildew, insects, soot, and acid fumes. This quality makes it especially good for awnings, lawn and beach umbrellas, and lawn furniture.

Made from salt, natural gas, coke, and air, Dynel is the most economical of these synthetic fibers. It is more like wool than any of the other new fibers. Dynel is resilient, feels warm to the touch, and retains warmth. It shrinks and stretches very little, dries quickly, is strong when either wet or dry, and burns only when held in a flame. It is mildew- and moth-proof, resistant to chemicals, and does not cause allergies. Dynel's fastness to laundering, light, and fumes is excellent, making it highly desirable for many uses. Wearing apparel and furnishings, such as blankets and drapery fabrics, will be made of this synthetic fiber.

BETTENHAUSEN WILL DRIVE A
BELANGER SPECIAL

LANGHORNE, June 14 — Tony Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, Ill., will drive the same Belanger Special in which Lee Wallard won the Indianapolis 500-mile race in the AAA-sanctioned 100-mile national championship race at Langhorne Speedway, Sunday, June 24, it was announced today by Murrell Belanger of Crown Point, Ind., owner of the car.

Belanger forwarded Bettenhausen's entry as well as that of a second Belanger Special without naming a driver to Co-promoters Irv Fried and Al Gerber after Bettenhausen drove No. 99 to victory in a 100-mile championship event before 25,000 people at Milwaukee last Sunday. Bettenhausen pocketed $4,500 after the Milwaukee win, another plumb which escaped Wallard who is now recovering from serious burns sustained at Reading, Pa., June 3.

Bettenhausen is one of the best known dirt track drivers in the nation, has given eastern fans many thrills in the past at Langhorne. Last year he split fifth place money at Indianapolis by serving as a reserve driver for Joie Chitwood and this year he pushed the Mohawk Special into ninth place, collecting $4,662.12.

Henry Banks of Compton, Calif., 1950 AAA national champion, will compete at Langhorne in defense of his title, while Bill Schindler of Freeport, L. I., veteran one-legged star, has flipped his helmet into the airway. Jack McGrath of Glendale, Calif., who split third money at Indianapolis with Manuel Ayulo of Burbank, Calif., has also entered.

The national championship field will compete for a guaranteed purse of $7,500 against 40 percent of the receipts after taxes are deducted, and the promoters believe the prize money will top anything in Langhorne's history, enough to assure fans that every driver will make an all out effort to win.
